

USING THE UNIQUE SELF COACHING PROCESS

The Unique Self Coaching Process provides almost a conveyor belt that moves people toward their creative potential. Creativity is a misunderstood word. I am not referring here to nice drawings and pretty music, though each can, absolutely, be a creative enterprise. No, in this context, we are creative when we act from a place of connection to the power animating creation. When each of us realizes and draws from our connection to source, to the love intelligence driving evolution, we are reaching for our creative potential. The process breaks through the structures of our “false self,” structures that keep us separate from that power. Once cracked open, we tap into that essential creative power, channeling it in the way that each of us, uniquely, has the gifts and opportunities to do.

HOW CAN IT BE USED

The process can be used to move us forward in any truly creative endeavor of our lives.

Our Partnerships are certainly creative opportunities. When two people, each expressing their own creative potential, are drawn together, the creative possibilities grow exponentially. Exploring creative potential together opens us to imagine what can be!

Focusing on my own work, I recognize that preachers, who are seeking to give society a glimpse into the impossible mystery so they might draw inspiration and power from it, are clearly called to draw on source. The process will be invaluable for those working to reach their creative potential in this calling.

Indeed artists of any stripe, and musicians together, do well to practice tapping into that which is essentially creative in the human spirit. The USCP provides an opportunity for them to find fresh creative energy within. Writers too need to break through the false self. None of these need do this to become more commercially viable; plenty of artists have made a living from a very false view of the self. But, if you want to make a contribution to the world, then you need to break through the false self and connect to the unique expression of creative power that is yours to put into the world.

Politicians. Yeah, I know, I’m dreaming, but the reality is that if politicians, whose job it is to join people together so that society can progress, would do well to connect to the unique expression of the power of creation they can offer the world.

Frankly, I thought of these off the top of my head. Can you imagine other uses? Join us! Learn the process and work to express your creative potential.